Horizon House Inspires Community to Rethink Aging

It's a scene from a typical college campus: a dozen students gathered around a lecturer – coffee cups in hand. Questions fly back and forth as debates break out, and a rich dialogue ensues.

Here, the students are residents of CHHSM member Horizon House, a life plan community in Seattle, Washington. The lecturer is Thomas Moore, Horizon House's first scholar-in-residence. Read more »

Still Standing: Artist Celebrates Resilience of Chicago Youth

When Gerald Griffin was a freshman in high school, his family moved to the Pilsen neighborhood of Chicago where he began attending a brand new, fully equipped high school. "I was in an English class, doodling when I should have been finishing my paper, and this girl looked over my shoulder and said, 'That's really nice. You should be our artist on the school newspaper,'" Griffin recalls. Read more »

CHHSM Unveils Mission, Vision and Values

It's been more than 20 years since CHHSM has taken a deep look at its organizational purpose - but that's now changed. This week, after 18 months of missional introspection, CHHSM's Board of Directors finalized new Mission, Vision and Values statements that will shape the member association's work for years to come.
